I need to know, because my daughter's school is trying to kick her out for the rest of this year and all of next year, for having these pills.

I have retained an attorney, and will fight them. However we need to know the mg breakdown for the yellow jacket. The school is calling them caffeine pills, and that caffeine is a drug. We believe that Mountain Dew has more caffeine than 1 yellowjacket. They sell Mountain Dew in there machine. Do I need my attorney to get this info from you?

She bought the pills herself at a gas station and she is only 16.

What is the break down of mg per pill?

Julie wrote:

The caffeine content is about the same as 2-3 six oz cups of coffee. If you have any further questions please contact us at 1-800-LITE-LINE or visit www.stacker2.com.
